

Bio for Nancy Offei

Nancy Offei is born and bred by both parents in Ghana where she grew up to understand the common humanity of the extended family she was born into. This made her to develop good fellow feeling and care for other people irrespective of their backgrounds. Through the support of her family, she has gone through education from the basic level up to the university level. She holds Bachelor of Science (Hons) in Psychology from the University of Cape Coast in the Central Region of Ghana.

Nancy is highly motivated and hardworking person with excellent communication and interpersonal skills seeking to contribute to the development of individuals, families and the society at large. She works as a Program Officer where she helps in providing training support to young people in building their capacity. She is able to work independently but she also blends very well in a team. Her organizational skills and professionalism enable her to interact well with different stakeholders. With her background in Psychology coupled with her working experience, she is able to handle and motivate people appropriately.

Her ambition is to contribute her quota to addressing socio-economic development needs in the society by empowering people, promoting equity and equality, working with relevant stakeholders to ensure people become self-reliant. She also aims at pursuing further academic studies in order to upgrade her expertise where she can be in position to provide further professional services to ensure the world become a better place for all, particularly women.
